BREED THEATER.

Thou Shalt Not, Beautiful Scenic Biograph Story.

A new theme for a motion picture is presented in the exquisitely handled subject of the Biograph at the Breed this week and entitled Thou Shak Not. The story is enacted, as are many of the others of this enterprising company, as Los Angeles, Cal., and 'mid the generous contributions of Flora the many interesting scenes take place. The novel theme tells of a young man who becomes engaged to a girl of his choice, and, neglecting a persistent who becomes engaged to a girl of his choice, and, neglecting a persistent cough, firds himself in an advanced stage of the white plague. His physician forbids him marrying and he tells his promised bride of his condition, and she refuses to sever the engagement. The physician takes the case in hand and secures an actress to portray the role of the "other woman," and the faithful bride-elect, finding the actress ardently embracing her lover, denounces him at once, not realizing that she at the same time seals the doom of her happiness and is the victim of a deception.

eception. The picture offers a great lesson and while a most delicate subject it is handled in such a way as to please all who witness it. Miss Seibert eings by request the popular soughit of the day. I'm Longing for Tomorrow, also singing the pretty child song, I'm Not Mad at You.

AN OLD PLATTER

Mrs. Higgins of Wall Avenue Has One From Which Napoleon Ate.

In the home of Mrs. William Higgins at 7 Wall avenue is an old platter which has perhaps a more interesting history than any other platter owned by an American. It is of heavy earthen-ware, sixteen inches long by twelve inches wide, old-fashioned, with a narrow biae border. It is cracked, too, almost its entire length, and the dish is a network of crosses like tiny wrinkles, speaking plainly of age and usage. Yet from this old platter one of the world's greatest generals was of the world's greatest generals was served says The Waterbury Sunday Republican.

The dish was brought from the island of St. Helens by James Egan, an officer in the British army, who was for a time one of Napoleon's body guard. Mr. Egan was an uncle of Mrs. Higgins, who tells this story.

"My uncle was wounded at the battle of Waterloo—let me see, what year was that? 1815 or 1816 I think. Anyway, you can look it up. He was was that? 1815 or 1815 It think. Anyway, you can look it up. He was wounded in the knee and for a considerable time was incapacitated for active field service, so be was assigned to service at St. Helena as senior officer of Napoleon's body guard. Many of the guard were in sympathy with Napoleon and a conspiracy to assist him to escape in a hogshead was at one time nearly consummated.

Tho, there is nothing about it in the text books, but it was true. For a time French vessels were permitted to stop at the island. Provisions were brought to the place some times in hogsheads, and it was planned to hide Napoleon in one of these empty hogsheads and in the confusion of loading it was hoped that he might not be discovered. My uncle knew of the plan and arranged to be on duty in another part of the island.

"The only result of the plan, how-ice be on duty in another part of the fisiand.

"The only result of the plan, however, was to curtail the liberty of the suile. He was discovered by the inspectors and after that no foreign boat was allowed to port at St. Helena. Effort was made to keep the incident from becoming known, and it was not until shortly before his death that my uncle would tell the story.

"My uncle remained at the island until he was discharged from the army and when he cappe away, after several years' service with the little general, whom he had grown to love, he brought with him a number of relics and soutenirs. He gave my mother, his sister, this old platter and a cup. The my sint to my sister and the platter try them.

is mine. I have had many offers from people who wanted to buy it, but I shall never sell it."

PICTURE OF T. S. GOLD. State Board of Agriculture Asks for Popular Subscription.

The state board of agriculture through its secretary, I. C. Fanton through its secretary, I. C. Fanton, of Westport, is taking up—the work of procuring an oil portrait of its former secretary, the late T. S. Gold, to be placed in the state capitol in the room assigned to the committee on agriculture. The portrait was painted by J. H. Niemeyer of New Haven from life and will cost $300. In the belief that there are 300 people in the state who will be glad to give $1 each the plan is to ask for subscriptions of $1 to be sent to I. C. Fanton, secretary of the board, Westport, who will return receipt for the money and in addition a photograph or print of the portrait. The name of each subscriber will be recorded and all names sent suitably embossed, to the family of Mr. suitably embossed, to the family of Mr Mr. Gold was active in behalf of the foundation of the agriculture school at Storrs in 1877 and was for 20 years a trustee of the school and college.

His greatest work was the management of the state board of agriculture for thirty-four years. When there were no granges, no farmers' institutes, no field meetings to bring farmers tofield meetings to bring farmers to-gether, he made the winter meetings of the board the great rallying place for all intelligent farmers.

Gift to Yale.

A gift of some importance was announced last week at Yale, from the Lumbermen's association of America amounting to $35,000. President Hadley announced that the association had increased its pledge to the university from $65,000 to $100,000 for the professorship of practical lumbering, thereby completing the endowment for the professorship.

A WORTHY DELEGATION

ix little Congressmen,
Well behaved and good—sarker. Wiley, Gardner, Howe
Loudenslager, Wood—
Ever let their anger rise,
Nevor made a speech
to call a fellow-statesman
A twant or a leech;
Pook the ground that Congress
Should be seen, not heard;
simply voted with the gang
And never said a word,

Six Ropresentatives,
Regular and good—
Parker, Wiley, Gardner, Howell,
Loudenslager, Wood—
Voting safe and faithfully
Through the hot discension,
Wondering if the folk at home
Were paying much attention;
Six little Congressmen,
Striving hard to please,
Standing with the gang, but, sh!
So feeble in the knees!
